4	The Japanese government must do more to protect the environment. This is essential in order to preserve the nation's endangered species and to reduce pollution. Today, numerous plant and animal species in Japan are seriously threatened. For example, famous species like the crested ibis and Iriomote cat have been greatly reduced in number because of habitat loss. The government should therefore provide them with safe habitats where they are able to find sufficient food. Pollution is another area where more needs to be done. For example, dirty air has greatly increased the number of children with asthma. Japan's children deserve to be able to play outside without inhaling polluted air. Japan has a rich variety of plant and animal species, and respect for nature is an important part of its culture. The government must do more to protect the country's nature and provide a healthy, unpolluted environment for its citizens.
