4	I do not think that the government should limit the number of tourists who visit areas of natural beauty. To begin with, limiting tourists would hurt the economy. Most areas of natural beauty are in the countryside, and without tourism these places would lose a lot of income. To continue, tourists who visit beautiful areas usually go home feeling that it is important to protect these places. As a result, they will be more likely to do environmentally friendly things in their own lives. So, for these reasons, I disagree with the idea of limiting tourists at areas of natural beauty.
