We Are Slowly Poisoning Our Environment!

Consume, consume, consume! In America the consumer is king. To keep the wheels of industry turning, we manufacture consumer goods in endless quantities, and, in the process, are ( 21 ) exhausting our natural resources. But this is only half the problem. What do we do with manufactured products when they are ( 22 )? They must be disposed of, but how and where? Unsightly junkyards* full of useless automobiles already “surround” every city in the nation. Americans throw away 80 billion bottles and cans each year, enough to build more than 10 piles to the moon. There isn’t room for much more waste, and yet the factories ( 23 ) going. Our standard of living, one of the highest in the world, requires the consumption of manufactured products in ever-increasing amounts. About to be buried in our own waste, we are caught in a trap.

It wasn’t always like this. Only 100 years ago, Americans lived more in harmony with nature. There weren’t as many people then, and their wants were ( 24 ). Whatever waste was produced could be absorbed and soon covered over by nature. Today this harmonious relationship is threatened by our ( 25 ) of foresight and planning, and by carelessness and greed. We are slowly poisoning our environment!

Memory

Why is it that we can remember certain things and not others? Why can we remember a special or dramatic event in our childhood, for example, and yet forget a telephone number we looked up only a few minutes earlier? Why is it that healthy people of all ages sometimes forget things from the recent past?

Humans seem to remember the past on two different levels. One level is called short-term memory, and the other is called long-term memory. Short-term memory allows us to remember the last few minutes of a conversation or that we left the pot boiling on the stove. In long-term memory, we store information about events which were very important for us and information which we carefully learned and tried to memorize. The things we are most likely to remember include our most pleasant and enjoyable experiences, while the things we most often forget are names, numbers, dates, and anything we are not able to understand. We also have difficulty remembering things when we are frustrated, tired, or not paying attention. There also seems to be a limit to what we can remember. As we get older, we lose more and more memories, leaving only the most important in the mental space available. If we could remember everything, of course, life would be unbearable.

Though research on the working of our memory has discovered a lot, there are still many things we don't understand. For example, how are facts moved from short-term to long-term memory? And why are people who have forgotten their own names still able to speak? Perhaps someday we'll be able to answer these questions.

(26) Which of the following statements is false?

- 1 Humans have difficulty remembering names, dates, and numbers.
- 2 We can often recall things when we are frustrated or tired.
- 3 People of all ages sometimes forget things that have recently happened.
- 4 There are many things about memory yet to be discovered.

(27) Which aspect of human memory is already understood?

- 1 That memory is separated into two levels.
- 2 Why people who forget their own names can also speak.
- 3 Why some memories never become long-term.
- 4 That short-term memory and long-term memory are the same.

(28) According to the passage, which of the following are we most likely to remember for a long time?

- 1 A phone number we just heard.
- 2 A birthday party we enjoyed as a child.
- 3 A story we read when we were tired.
- 4 A name of an unfamiliar classmate.

(29) What would happen if we could remember everything?

- 1 Our memories would decrease.
- 2 Our available mental space would increase.
- 3 Our lives would be extremely difficult.
- 4 Our memories would be vague.

(30) Which of the following statements best summarizes the passage?

- 1 We sometimes forget pleasant memories.
- 2 Healthy people can improve their memories.
- 3 Many questions about memory are still a mystery.
- 4 Long-term memory will always be remembered.

The Magic of Touch

Few people fully realize that human touch is perhaps our most powerful form of communication. It is necessary for good health and is probably a requirement for survival. Indeed, it is a fact that children who are raised without being touched will become physically or mentally weak and may even die. The simple touch of another person's hand reduces the human heart rate and lowers blood pressure. Touch also helps the brain produce endorphins, natural chemicals that reduce pain. That's why a mother's hug can often help a child with a cut knee actually feel better.

Research by the Touch Research Institute (TRI) in the United States shows that massages have a positive effect on a variety of illnesses. If premature babies are given massages, they gain weight faster and are able to leave the hospital an average of six days earlier than similar babies who do not receive such treatment. In another study, a group of elderly Americans was not only given massages but also trained to give massages to small children at a TRI preschool. While the elderly people in the study benefited from receiving massages, giving massages was even more beneficial to their well-being. At the end of the study, they were found to be healthier, happier, and more active than the average person their age.

It's no surprise that massages have become increasingly popular in the United States in recent years. According to the TRI, some 25 million Americans visit professionals for massages every year—and these numbers do not include the growing number of employees who receive massages in the workplace, or the children of the 10,000 parents now studying baby massage therapy.

(31) This article says that touch is

- 1 not as important as most people think it is.
- 2 only important for some infants and older people.
- 3 probably necessary for human beings to live.
- 4 unnecessary for most people but still a good idea.

(32) Why do children with minor injuries often feel better when their mothers hug them?

- 1 Endorphins in children's brains suddenly decrease.
- 2 Children become physically weaker than usual.
- 3 Children's blood pressure gradually rises.
- 4 Children's brains release natural painkillers.

(33) Babies who are born early

- 1 grow faster and leave the hospital earlier than other babies.
- 2 benefit greatly from receiving massage treatment.
- 3 tend to gain weight faster than babies who are born late.
- 4 need at least six days of baby massage therapy.

(34) Elderly Americans have discovered that giving massages

- 1 makes them tired and less active than usual.
- 2 is not only very difficult but also hard to learn.
- 3 makes them healthier and happier than just receiving massages.
- 4 is less helpful than receiving massages from someone else.

(35) According to the Touch Research Institute,

- 1 the number of children who learn baby massage therapy from their parents is increasing.
- 2 about 25 million Americans receive massages from professionals at work.
- 3 10,000 parents take their children to professionals for massages every year.
- 4 the total number of Americans receiving massages every year is over 25 million.

Grab Your Board, Mate!

In Australia, just as in most countries with beaches, waves, warm weather, and endless coastline, surfing is a popular sport. With the nation's frequently sunny weather, surfers flock to the local seashore by the thousands, attracted by surfing's fun-loving culture and Australia's excellent waves. Yet, surfing isn't just limited to the warmer parts of the country—you can find many die-hard surfers who'll try their sport anywhere, anytime. Cold-weather surfers perfect their skill by challenging the larger winter waves, unafraid of a little chilly weather. In fact, the variety of Australia's climate and surfing conditions is probably the main reason why this nation has produced some of the world's best and most famous surfers. These professionals have successfully matched their wits against waves as big as houses all around the world.

Questions

No.26 What is the speaker mainly talking about?

No.27 According to the speaker, what has made Australia produce so many world-class surfers?

(No.26)

- 1 The history of surfing in Australia.
- 2 Reasons for the popularity of surfing in Australia.
- 3 The weather at popular surfing spots in Australia.
- 4 Overcrowding of surfing beaches in Australia.

(No.27)

- 1 The sunny coastline.
- 2 The fun-loving culture.
- 3 The variety of surfing conditions.
- 4 The number of qualified professionals.

No.28 & No.29Make My Day—Creating Your Own Calendars

Kids love calendars. There's something orderly, even powerful, about keeping track of time by marking off the days on a calendar. Furthermore, a proper appreciation of calendars allows children to positively anticipate the future. But even if your child isn't interested in an accurate account of each passing month, the calendar can serve as a decorative element in his or her room. So, why not let your children make one by themselves? It'll be an excellent time for you to demonstrate preplanning to your child, by showing how to design a layout and how to translate this design into reality. The materials don't need to be anything special. With a little imagination, you probably can find most of the items right at home. But remember: making calendars should never be a chore. It should be fun, not something stressful.

Questions*No.28 Why is it good for children to make their own calendars?*No.29 What does the speaker want parents to keep in mind about calendar making?

(No.28)

- 1 They can pass each month more quickly.
- 2 They can have fun with friends.
- 3 They can learn to plan for the future.
- 4 They can use special materials.

(No.29)

- 1 It will add stress to children's lives.
- 2 It should be an enjoyable activity.

No.30Florida—A Surprise Around Every Corner

In 1513, Spanish explorer Ponce de Leon was fascinated by the Carib Indian songs about a beautiful land with a magical Fountain of Youth. Following the route described in these chants, Ponce de Leon set sail for his enchanted destination. He named the newfound territory "Florida," because he was impressed by the abundance of brilliantly colored flowers. Although each Florida region is remarkably different, the state's intriguing past can be seen everywhere today, with a surprise around every corner. Enjoy everything from archaeological digs to space-age wonders. Become Robinson Crusoe on a deserted tropical island or get the royal treatment at a luxurious resort. From the most awesome theme parks in the world to the most beautiful beaches in the country, Florida has it all. Discover for yourself the legendary magic of Florida.
