A Strange Experience

Five years ago, my Uncle George became famous. Let me tell you what happened. One autumn evening, at about nine o'clock, he went out into the garden behind his house to get some fresh air. It was a very dark night, and the air was a little cold. After a few minutes, Uncle George turned to go back into the house. As he did, he saw a very bright light in the sky. It was moving slowly from left to right. The light stopped moving and then began to go up and up, higher and higher, until he couldn't see it any longer.

The next day, he told his neighbors about it, and a few hours later, some newspaper reporters came to ask him questions. He soon became famous, and we even saw him on TV. Everyone wanted to talk to him about the strange light in the sky.

Some people said it was a spaceship; others said it was a hot air balloon. One scientist said it was only a bright star or planet, and another said Uncle George saw the lights of a plane or helicopter.

After a few days, the newspapers and television lost interest in the story. But Uncle George continued to get many telephone calls from people who heard about his experience in the garden. They asked him what he saw. But he still doesn't know.

What do you think of his strange experience?

(26) Why did Uncle George go out into the garden?

- 1 Because it was nine o'clock.
- 2 Because he wanted some fresh air.
- 3 Because it was a dark night.
- 4 Because he saw something in the sky.

(27) What was Uncle George's strange experience?

- 1 He began to go up and down.
- 2 He turned to go back to the house.
- 3 He saw something bright in the sky.
- 4 He couldn't see the sky any longer.

(28) How did the neighbors first learn about the strange light?

- 1 They heard about it from Uncle George.
- 2 They read about it in the newspapers.
- 3 They saw a movie about it on television.
- 4 They heard about it on the radio.

(29) After a few days, did everyone lose interest in the story?

- 1 Yes, everyone lost interest.
- 2 No, many people were still interested.
- 3 Television did, but the newspapers didn't.
- 4 The newspapers did, but television didn't.

(30) Does Uncle George know what the light was?

- 1 Yes, he thinks it was a hot air balloon.
- 2 Yes, he thinks it was a spaceship.
- 3 No, he didn't see a light.
- 4 No, he has no idea what it was.

Sleep and Dreams

Did you know that though we spend about one-third of our lives sleeping, scientists are still not sure why we need to sleep? Research shows that our body can repair itself when we are lying down and watching television, for example. Scientists also say that our bodies can work fairly well without sleep for nearly 60 hours. And yet, we all know that if we don't sleep we can't think very well and are unable to have a meaningful conversation.

Sleep, according to scientists, is actually a very complicated process. During an average night, we pass through as many as seven sleep states. In addition, we will probably change our body position at least as many times as we change sleep states. One of the most important sleep states is called REM, or Rapid Eye Movement. In fact, about 20% of our total sleeping time is spent in REM. It is during this time that we dream.

Though scientists are still not sure why we dream, they all agree that, at least sometimes, we need to dream. Some scientists think that when we dream, the brain decides what information to keep and what to throw away. Others believe that while we dream, the brain tries to find new answers to our problems. Since a third of our lives is spent sleeping, it is good to know that the time is not wasted.

- (31) Scientists researching sleep have discovered that
- 1 there is only one answer for why we sleep.
 - 2 the body can repair itself even when we are awake.
 - 3 we spend about one-third of our lives watching television.
 - 4 most people can sleep about 60 hours at a time.
- (32) What might happen if you miss one or two nights' sleep?
- 1 Your body will break down.
 - 2 Your body will not repair itself again.
 - 3 Your thinking ability may get worse.
 - 4 Your conversational ability may improve.
- (33) According to the passage, when people sleep, they
- 1 pass through several sleep states.
 - 2 spend all night in the REM state.
 - 3 only spend time repairing their bodies.
 - 4 stay in the same position during all sleep states.
- (34) Why is the REM state important?
- 1 It makes us change our body position.
 - 2 It takes up most of the time we spend sleeping.
 - 3 It is experienced by 20% of human beings.
 - 4 It is the time when we tend to dream.
- (35) According to the passage, we may dream for the purpose of
- 1 trying to forget our problems.
 - 2 resting our bodies completely.
 - 3 keeping and throwing away information.
 - 4 collecting and remembering all information.
