I agree that Japan should accept more people from other countries to work in Japan. First, in this aging society, it is necessary to increase the working-age population. This is especially important for workplaces that need many workers, such as construction sites and nursing homes. Second, accepting people from abroad will bring new ideas to Japanese society. By exchanging opinions with people who have different cultures and customs, people will be able to make something new and creative. Therefore, I think accepting more foreign workers would be a good idea for Japan.
