Getting a Pet

Michelle has lived in a small house by herself for two years. She sometimes felt a little lonely, so she had been thinking about getting a pet. Last year, her neighbor's dog had five puppies, and he was looking for people to give them homes. Michelle went to her neighbor's house to see the puppies. She really liked a small, brown one, and she decided to name him Albert. A few weeks later, when Albert was old enough, she (26). After that, she really enjoyed taking him for walks and playing with him at parks on the weekends.

However, Michelle later realized how hard it was to look after a pet. She often did not know what to do or how to help him. She soon started (27). She thinks they are very helpful because they have a lot of information she needs. Michelle hopes that doing this will help her become a good dog owner.

Underwater National Park

In the United States, there is a special park called Dry Tortugas National Park. Although it has a few small islands, 99 percent of the 262-square-kilometer park is under the ocean. It has one of the largest coral reefs* in the world, and many rare types of sharks, turtles, and other animals live and have their babies there. As a national park, Dry Tortugas (28). First, it gives people the chance to see a unique environment. Second, it protects the animals and plants in the area, and third, it gives scientists a place to study these animals and plants.

Every year, about 63,000 people visit the park. However, the park is (29). There are no roads, so people must access it by plane, ferry, or boat. Ferries and boats can damage the coral and underwater environment when they drop their heavy anchors* to the ocean floor. Therefore, the park has special wood platforms where people can tie their boats instead. Once they are at the park, visitors can enjoy activities like swimming, snorkeling, and scuba diving.

The only people living in the park are rangers, who protect and study the environment there. They stop people from fishing in the wrong areas or killing animals. They also help scientists to study the environment. Rangers put tags on birds and fish to see how they live, and they record lots of information about the coral reef. By learning (30), rangers and scientists hope to protect this unique environment for the future.

From: Kelly Nelson <k-nelson@housemail.com>
 To: Fumiko Kobayashi <f-kobayashi@readmail.co.jp>
 Date: May 31
 Subject: Thank you!

Hi Mrs. Kobayashi,

Thank you for being my host mother last summer. I really enjoyed my trip to Japan. I had so much fun visiting Kyoto with your daughter, Aya. It's such a beautiful city. Also, thank you for taking me to your Japanese flower arrangement show. I hope Aya can come and stay with me in New York this summer and study English!

I really miss Japan a lot, and I've been writing on my website about the great time that I had. In fact, my Japanese teacher at my high school has asked me to tell the class about my stay in Japan. She wants me to give a presentation next Friday and show the class my photos. I'm going to share some photos of me wearing a kimono. I was wondering if I could introduce you to my class. Could you do a five-minute video chat with my class at the beginning of my presentation? My class is at 9 a.m. here in New York, so it would be early evening in Japan. Please let me know if you can do it. If not, it's OK. Hope to talk to you soon!

All the best,
 Kelly

- 1 Give her class some presents.
 - 2 Give a presentation about her trip.
 - 3 Put some photos on the class website.
 - 4 Put on a kimono for her Japanese class.

- (33) Kelly asks Mrs. Kobayashi
- 1 to talk to her Japanese class.
 - 2 to help her practice her speech.
 - 3 how she should start her presentation.
 - 4 when she can come to New York.

Female Airline Pilots

Flying a plane is a challenging job. Because of the long hours and stress, not many people want to become pilots. In particular, it is hard to find female pilots. Even though the number of women working in most fields is increasing these days, the number of female pilots is low. In fact, in 2016, only about 5 percent of the world's airline pilots were female. Many airlines are now trying to increase the number of female pilots.

According to research, every year more and more people are traveling by plane. It is believed that in the near future, about 7 billion people will travel by plane each year. Therefore, airlines are trying to hire more pilots. However, it is not easy to find new pilots. Training costs a lot of money, and pilots usually work long hours and are often away from home. Because of this, few people are interested in becoming a pilot.

One way to get more pilots is to hire more women. Hoping more women will apply for the job, one major airline in the United Kingdom is showing more pictures of women on its website to hire pilots. Also, an airline in Vietnam is trying to create flexible work schedules and offering childcare for female pilots who have children. They hope to be able to support women who want to work and have families.

Female pilots have another challenge, though. Some passengers do not trust female pilots. That means that female pilots have another important role—changing people's views. For example, Sophia Kuo, a pilot in Taiwan, says that passengers often seem surprised that a woman is their pilot, but slowly people are getting used to seeing her. Kim Noakes, an American pilot, says that when young girls ride on her planes, they realize that they, too, can become pilots. She hopes that one day more girls will dream of being pilots.

- (34) What is true about flying planes as a job?
- 1 More and more men are interested in doing it.
 - 2 Only about 5 percent of people have the skills to do it.
 - 3 There are not many people who are interested in doing it.
 - 4 The number of women who want to do it increased in 2016.

- (35) What is one problem airlines have?
- 1 They need more pilots because more people travel by plane.
 - 2 They do not have an easy way to find new customers.
 - 3 It takes a lot of time to build more planes for their pilots to fly.
 - 4 It costs too much money to hire pilots with a lot of experience.

- (36) One airline in Vietnam
- 1 is trying to make it easier for women with children to work as pilots.
 - 2 uses pictures of female pilots on its website to hire female pilots.
 - 3 has made it easier for families with children to fly on planes.
 - 4 pays less money to women who want to become pilots.

- (37) What is one role that female pilots have?
- 1 They share new information with passengers.
 - 2 They teach young girls how to fly planes.
 - 3 They show passengers views from the plane.
 - 4 They help passengers to see that women can be pilots.
