4	I think more people will buy locally produced food in the future. To begin with, more and more people are interested in helping the environment. Locally produced food does not need to be transported over long distances by truck, so it causes much less air pollution. In addition, many people want to improve their local economy. Buying food produced nearby helps local farmers, and this can make the local economy stronger. In conclusion, I think locally produced food will be bought by more and more people in the future.
