4	I believe that people will still need to learn foreign languages in the future. I have two reasons for this opinion. To begin with, people who try to communicate with these electronic devices sometimes have a problem understanding cultural differences. This can cause serious misunderstandings between people. In addition, using computer translation often takes time. However, when people talk to each other directly, they can respond quickly and effectively. In summary, I think that people will need to learn foreign languages, even when computer translation becomes more common.
