4	I do not think the number of people who put solar panels on their homes will increase. First, the amount of electricity produced by solar panels depends on the weather. Some people live in places where it is often cloudy, especially in winter, and solar panels will not produce much electricity in those places. Second, the cost of putting solar panels on a home is very high. Even though this cost has become much cheaper, it is still expensive for many people. Therefore, I do not think more people will put solar panels on their homes in the future.
