4	I think more Japanese universities will offer classes in English for a variety of subjects in the future. First of all, classes in English can help students become global citizens who play an active role in the international community. By taking such classes, students can improve their English skills and learn to think about things more globally. Second, offering more classes in English would attract more students from abroad. This would help universities to increase the diversity of their students, giving students the chance to meet people from different backgrounds. For these reasons, I think more Japanese universities will offer classes in English.
