4	I think that more local governments in Japan will use social networking services to send emergency information about natural disasters. To begin with, by using social networking services, local governments can quickly provide the latest information to people. This information is necessary for people's safety when natural disasters happen. In addition, the government will be able to share emergency information with large numbers of people. Today, more and more people are using social networking services. For these two reasons, I think more governments will do this in the future.
