4	I do not agree that Japanese people work too much. First, the number of companies that pay more attention to their employees' health is increasing. Working too much often causes stress that may lead to various kinds of illnesses. Second, recently, a lot of companies have begun using technology that reduces the amount of work that people need to do. For example, some companies use robots that can serve food to their customers. For these reasons, I do not think Japanese people work too much.
