4	I think such tourist sites will become more common in the future. First, by making it easier for tourists in wheelchairs to move around, the number of visitors will increase. As a result, more people will be able to understand the historical value of these sites. Second, tourist sites can help create a more equal society. One of the responsibilities of facilities open to the public should be to provide experiences to all people. For these reasons, I think tourist sites where wheelchair users can move around easily will increase in the future.
