4 I think Japanese organizations should send more doctors to countries where there is a shortage of them. First, Japan has the medical skills to share with other countries. These skills can be taught to doctors overseas, which will improve the medical care in these countries. Second, going abroad will provide doctors with experiences that they cannot get in Japan. For example, doctors will have to communicate with other staff and patients in a foreign language. Therefore, I think Japanese organizations should send more doctors to countries where there are not enough of them.
