I think Japan should use the Internet for people to vote in elections. First, people who find it difficult to go to voting places will be able to vote from almost anywhere. For example, Japanese people who are working or traveling in foreign countries can easily participate in elections. Second, the results will be known more quickly. Now, it takes time to count all the votes, but by using the Internet, accurate results can be shown to the public immediately. Therefore, I think it would be good for Japan to use the Internet for people to vote in elections.
