4	Many countries are using solar energy to produce electricity. This is because producing electricity with solar energy does not harm the environment and helps people save money on their electricity bills. However, finding places to set up many panels can be hard, and the amount of electricity produced is not stable because of the weather.
5	I think these spaces will become more common in the future. First, people can use their time more efficiently. For example, if they have time between one business appointment and another, they can work in these spaces without having to go back to the office. Second, these spaces can help people in various situations. For instance, they will benefit people who need to respond to an urgent request when they are out of the office. Therefore, I think small working spaces at stations will become more common in the future.
