4	Some people choose to go to other countries to work. While working abroad, they can have new experiences and learn a local language that is helpful for their future. However, they have to face issues with differences in customs at work and feel lonely for not being able to visit their family and friends easily.
5	I think so. First, people who work in these companies can expect to earn a steady income. Demand for environmentally friendly products is growing, and some companies are performing well. Second, people can take pride in their work. This is because working for a company that provides environmentally friendly products and services gives people the feeling that they can contribute to society. Therefore, I think the number of people who choose to work for companies that create environmentally friendly products and services will increase in the future.
