4	Many consumers have begun paying closer attention to food additives. Food additives make it possible to store products for a longer time and to supplement nutrients that tend to be lacking. However, some additives may harm the human body if consumed regularly, and artificial flavors prevent consumers from enjoying the natural taste of ingredients.
5	I think this is a good idea. First, using smartphones to pay for things is convenient for children. Parents can also send money to their children instantly through smartphones, and this makes it easy for children to pay for things anytime. Second, children can manage their money easily by using smartphones. They can check on what and how much they have spent on their smartphones. Checking the amount of money they used helps them save their money. Therefore, I think it is a good idea for children to use their smartphones to pay for things.
