4	Volunteer tourism is becoming popular all over the world. Volunteers can learn important new skills for their future careers and experience a different culture. However, the quality of their work can be poor due to a lack of the right skills, and local people might lose opportunities to earn an income if more volunteers come.
5	I think this is a good idea. First, this offers a benefit for working people. They do not need to stay home to receive their packages, and they can pick them up at their convenience while commuting. Second, this helps reduce costs for delivery companies. This is because a package does not need to be delivered again if no one is home. As a result, lower labor and fuel expenses are needed. Therefore, I think it is a good idea for companies to allow customers to receive their delivery packages from lockers at train stations.
