4	Many city leaders permit street art in certain public places. It makes dull places more interesting and helps artists show their ideas to the public. However, some people think the art is just ugly writing, especially when artists paint without permission. Also, maintaining it costs money and prevents leaders from using funds for other projects.
5	I think this is a good idea. First, children can understand the importance of money. Some children spend their money so quickly that they have no money left when they find something they really want. Second, children can develop their independence. They start to check how much money they have and plan how to use it, and this teaches them to manage their own money. Therefore, I think it is a good idea for children to learn how to use money from an early age.
