4	Many learners and travelers are using translation apps more frequently. They help people understand unfamiliar words and let them talk more easily with others. However, they can produce inaccurate translations, which may cause serious misunderstandings. Also, using them too much can negatively affect language learning, as learners may not be able to learn new words.
5	I think this is a good idea. First, teaching students how to start their own companies is helpful for their future careers. They can learn how businesses operate, from product creation to financial management. Second, this idea helps students become more creative. In class, they think about questions without clear answers, such as what to sell, what types of customers to focus on, and ways to make a profit. Therefore, I think it is a good idea for schools to teach their students how to start their own companies.
