4	Governments use fishing limits because the number of fish is falling. These rules help increase the number of fish and make sure that fishing remains a good job. However, the price of fish might rise, which makes it hard to buy them. Also, some fishers could lose their jobs because they cannot catch enough fish.
5	I think this is a good idea. First, it helps cities and towns maintain the local environment. Unused land often becomes covered in weeds or trash, but using it for farming keeps the area clean and beautiful for residents. Second, it can promote a healthy lifestyle among local people. Growing vegetables provides people with physical exercise and opportunities to feel refreshed, which can improve their health both physically and mentally. Therefore, I think it is a good idea for local governments to let people use unused land for farming.
