4	Scientists use animal testing to check product safety. This testing helps people develop new ways to treat sick patients and ensures medicine does not cause unexpected harm to humans. However, this practice causes much pain to the creatures, so many people argue against it, and physical differences from humans can sometimes lead to incorrect results.
5	I think this will become more common. First, these vehicles provide great convenience for people. They can offer different kinds of fresh meals in parks or near offices where there are few restaurants, which helps workers and families save time. Second, it can be a good way to start a business. Since it is often cheaper to buy a vehicle than to rent a building, more people can start their own food businesses easily. Therefore, I think selling food from vehicles will become more common in the future.
