4	Playing for teams in other countries has become common for many Japanese athletes. It helps athletes improve their skills further. However, it can make local leagues less exciting because stars do not play in Japan.
5	I think having the same hobby as their parents is better for children. First, children can save money. They can use the same equipment and other things that their parents have at home. Second, children can talk with their parents about the hobby anytime. This allows them to have a good time together on weekends.
