4	Many older people are choosing to give up their driving licenses. This reduces car accidents and allows seniors to save lots of money on car repairs and fuel. However, it makes them feel less independent because they have to rely on others, and people in rural areas find it difficult to access places like hospitals.
5	I think this is a good idea. First, it can protect the mental health of employees. Messages sent outside of working hours can cause stress and prevent people from relaxing during their personal time. Second, it is a way to improve efficiency in the workplace. Workers who refresh themselves after going back home can concentrate better and get more work done when they return to the office. Therefore, I think it is a good idea for companies to stop sending work messages to workers outside of working hours.
